Young Nungas Yarning Together

The Young Nungas Yarning Together Program targets Indigenous youth aged between 12-18 years of age.

It identifies that many youth of secondary school age may be experiencing significant changes in their lives and that this time is a time where they may become exposed to risk taking activities through their peers.

This project will focus on building on the strengths of Indigenous youth, listening to the voice of Aboriginal youth and developing links with the community to identify and develop strategies for the prevention and harm minimization of drug use.

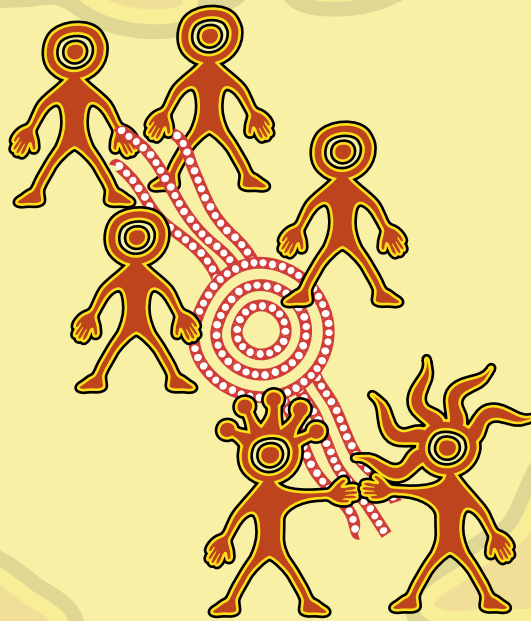

These Programs will be designed to encourage Indigenous participation by providing fun activities that are relevant to the needs of young Indigenous people.

They will be culturally appropriate and sensitive to the cultural needs of Aboriginal youth.

The Young Nungas Yarning Together Program will seek to support the community, particularly Indigenous youth as a vehicle for change.

Young Nungas Yarning Together Will

- Attract Indigenous youth to asset building programs that are culturally appropriate, educational and FUN, strengthening and building on the positives of young Indigenous people
- Train Indigenous Youth as peer educators
- Establish a Youth/Drug Prevention Round Table

The Young Nungas Yarning Together program

- Offers fun, innovative activities that provide options that reduce the chance of young people participating in activities that place them at risk.
- Offers educational and training pathways for Indigenous youth, working in groups, leadership skills, self esteem, confidence building workshops and activities
- Links to TAFE accreditation, future pathways in Certificate III & IV in Community Services Work (Alcohol and other Drug Work)
- Works closely with Community, Elders and other Aboriginal organisations
